A guide to the new BJConline.org

In May, the Baptist Joint Committee redesigned its website. BJConline.org has long been a dependable destination for religious liberty information, and the newly organized site allows visitors to easily navigate and access articles, columns, educational materials and other resources. Here are a few things you can expect when you go online:

An easy-to-navigate home page

Continue to scroll down the home page for the latest blog posts, columns and videos.

Mobile-responsive

Report from the Capital June 2014

Whether you're on a computer, smartphone or tablet, the BJC website adapts to your device so you can find the information you need on any platform.

An in-depth look at our work and history

Visit the Learn section for our comprehensive resource collection, including:

- Hymns, sermons, litanies and monologues for worship services
- Guides to navigating religion and public schools
- Joint statements and publications addressing church-state issues
- Ideas for engagement in political discourse
- BJC handouts and publications
- Report from the Capital archives

Visit the Take Action section for ways you can be involved in our work, and check out the Give section to support the BJC and hear from other friends of religious liberty.
